

Taking knowledge further: listening and reading list

The Media tab of The People of 1381 website has links to articles and short films.

Glossary of medieval terms

National Archives currency converter

What follows is a short list of listening and reading ideas for busy teachers. It is designed to support teacher knowledge about the uprising of 1381 and the later Middle Ages in England. All of these could be part of departmental reading/listening and discussion projects.

The Historical Association publication Exploring and teaching medieval history in schools contains articles from historians and articles about teaching.

The Historical Association also has many podcasts and resources for teaching medieval history linked from this landing page.

Ian Dawson has published material to support the teaching of the medieval period on his website ThinkingHistory.

Medieval objects in the Ashmolean Museum also provide a window to the medieval world.

The BBC Radio 4 programme In Our Time debates key topics, with a section called 'Medieval'.

The English Heritage 'An introduction to medieval England' page gives a useful overview of the period, with stories linked to English Heritage properties and some excellent images.

The Time Traveller's Guide to Medieval England by Ian Mortimer (Vintage, 2008) is well described as a handbook for visitors to the fourteenth century.

The readily available book about the Revolt recommended by the 'People of 1381' academic team is Juliet Barker's England, Arise: The people, the king and the Great Revolt of 1381 (Little, Brown, 2014).